

Overview

Contributed by Tim Higgins
Wednesday, 14 May 2008
Last Updated Friday, 16 May 2008

Mentality and Philosophy

1. The "All for One, One for All" philosophy poses a significant threat; members demand participation in assault behavior by all members who are present. The one-on-one fight of the past now becomes a full disturbance.
2. "Code of Conduct" terminologies include:
 - "I will not let my brother fall to a knee."
 - "All is all."
 - "All is well."
3. Incidents often occur over trivial matters that are viewed as disrespectful by rival members.
 - Striking through a rival's graffiti or painting it upside down.
 - Drinking from a plastic cup belonging to a rival gang member.
 - Showing a rival's hand signs upside down or crossing out a rival's hand signs with another finger
 - Breaking a rival's symbols.

Rules and codes of conduct such as those mentioned above must be strictly followed. Those members who choose not to participate in a gang activity are subject to disciplinary action or "violations." Violations can range from a beating, by fellow gang members for a given period of time, to death. Violation orders are often written out and signed by ranking members. Violence associated with these groups is often disciplinary in nature.